You may be able to find more information about this content with similar content from piano.io suit horns for halloween, LARPs, and other joyous events. This tutorial shows how to make horns from cheap, lightweight materials. (There are plenty of photos because I took one for each step to make the tutorial as clear as possible; but the project is quite simple and short — it took less than 2 hours.) You'll need: 1-2 sheets A4 of Craft Foam, preferably brown or white 0.5 mm mm wire (non-curved easy) Making Typing Metal Headband Acrylic paint - brown, black, or other color you want Hot Glue Scissors Wind scissors to cut wires by cutting a triangle from foam craft (a.k.a foam, in his Hebrew called Saul shape, usually sold at craft shop and hobby). The triangle should be about 15cm high- measurements are very flexible. Cut a thread that's about 5cm longer than your triangle (you'll use this extra wire to connect the horns to the headband). Connect the wire end to the top of the tiang and masking tapes. Turn your headrough and cassette masscular some masscular cassettes around the tip of the headquarters to close any gaps and make a cute tip bend the likeness on your hand (do side to your hand) to create a slight curve. Note that this will lightly dish your horns. Pinch the curve cornea to bring it back to a non-flat shape. (Optional) to create a more interesting texture, launch the foam towards the pointer and hold for a few seconds. Start looking beautiful! :) Connect the metal wire end to the 'front side' of the horn. Connect the metal wire to the headband, and twice it a few times around the top to keep in place. You can use some cassette masks to keep it in place, but I suggest keeping the heavy adeasion until you have both horns and you can see how you want them located. Metal headband with two horns! I use reference pictures for the angle and location of the horns; your horns are usually at the top and masking tapes. For a more organic texture, I added hot backyard lines (with a blue gun). Leave it cool. Applies paint (brown as a base, with a dark brown between the hot-glue lines). I also painted the cassette masks on the top – use a color that's similar to your hair. Ta-da! Going from my shitic content is/has been virtually historical food (ish, but since my brother's birthday is 3 days before Halloween, he asked me to help make it a suit as his birthday. She wanted to be Hellboy for a costume partying that she and her friends So I did my best to do the suit, and documented the process as an instructible. I note entirely to make sure it qualifies as Epic in the modern sense... but this instructible will certainly be Epic in the sense that it's a complicated suit with lots of props, and therefore the instructible is really long... I should say that I'm in no way 'qualified' to do any of this thing, and there are probably the best ways to do things, but that's instructible record how I did it. As for the end result, aside from some problems with matching different colors in red, the horns being a little shy along with the back-to-the-head have some trouble saying about, I'm very happy with it. I'll start out with a list of materials: 1 younger brother (or others who want to dig himself for the sake of a suit :) 1 black t shirt 1 time trench coat (yes, the one in the movie was leather, but that's way too expensive for the Halloween costume)1 pair of black pants 1 belt 1 Hellboy belt buckle (my brother got his buying the limited edition of the dvd)1 (left) fingerless glove, or glove you don't mind cutting the fingers off 1 small rosary, or the beads and cross to mark one 1 large rosary, or the large wooden cross and vertex beads Nerf gun matte black spray paint silver metallic acrylic paint 1/2 i leatherette/pleather/vinyl fabric (or leather, if you happen to have vertex lying around) needle & ; thread small belt (thread). that will but cut and glued) hot glue modelling clay plaster liquid latex 1 (right hand) hockey glove 2 rolls of stiff duct typing black acrylic paint 1 16x24 piece of 2 foam 1 piece of 1 1/4 pipe insulation 1 coathanger 1 stiff package theatrical cream foundation makeup 1 small pack black foundation cream theatrical cream makeoer translating face facing red powder nail polished 2 dollar store hair extension 1 hair foam and gum spirit 1 cigar i think of everything. I'm going to try to come back and add things I forgot as I go... Ok, so I know this one is not small enough to be Samaritan, or big enough to be Big Baby. It's really somewhere in the middle of the two. But I was racking my brain to find a prop gun that would fit with this suit, and this is what I came up with. For this step I use: Nerf gun matter black spray paint silver metallic paint First, I spray-painted it with black spray-paint material. I of course took Kim in bullets out for this, and I also put a bit of katboard folded into the hole under the pull-part design (gun fail, sorry) both kept this part open and protected the inside spring from receiving paint on it. Check out the note of the image to see where I mean since I know I don't make sense here but I can't think of a way to better describe it. Standard practical spray-paint applies here, make sure to do it outside or in a fine slits area, put some newspapers (or a pizza box) down to protect the soil from getting spray-painted too, paint in short, clash lights so far far from preventing pool and dipping of the paint. Washing pigs. After that was dry, I took some acrylic silver paint with a sponge makeup and wiped silver on the high dots of the gun. I think I maybe went a little further with the money, but the end result is satisfactory. I let that dry, pulled out the padlock bit, and the gun was finished. For this step I use: 1/2 m leather /pleather/vinyl fabric (or leather, if you happen to have some sets around) needle & ; small belt (which will be cut with glue) hot in order to make a hotel that fit the gun, I use the very scientific method to put the gun on the fabric and folding the fabric on, then cutting around it. What I ended up with is the form shown in the second picture. Then I take a needle with some embarrassing threads and elbows around the outside of the hotel, first make a simple get-and-down custom together and then go back to even holes to go the other way to make it seem a continuous kind of thing. The bracelet at the hotel is a kids' dollar shop belt in half and warm slippery to move to the top of the hotel. I also let it continue a part of the way down the back, and let a difference in the rain keep it on so that a belt might pass through the hole. I intended to sew the belt on and put the bottom half of the belt on the front so that it could curl ... but I ran out of time, and so I did it that way. If I had my brother introduced for this part, and if I had the proper materials, I would have made a cast his face in order to ensure that the device fit the last perfectly and was the proper scale etc. Unfortunately I didn't have my brother, so I did the whole thing up by excluding it all from modelling players. I use measurements of my own forehead, how it turns out is smaller than him, I thought I compensated for it, but the horns were still a little close together... In any case, for this step, I use: modelling clay board play or other portable surface 1 4 litre iced cream and below cut 2lb packet of latex powder liquid plates (alc or face powder) I built the form for the module using clay modelling on a piece of left plywood. First I sculpted a basic shape forehead (using, as I said, measure out my own that turned out to be a bit too small). Then I added bits of clay to eyes and horns. The horns shown in the picture below were a bit too big, so I cut them a little before adding the details. Up until that point I had just used my fingers, but to add the tabs on the face and fractures to their horns, I used a stick tool to take care of. You could just as easily use the end of a paintbrush, a butter knife, turned into a pair of tweezers... etc... Once the party was part sculpting iron, I then took the mold at the plywood base. It came out with very little effort, and I didn't even have to choose clay from the mold. Once I was fairly sure that the mold was dry, I poured into the liquid latex and swished it around to cover the sides. I didn't fill the whole thing up because the point of this is to make a skin, not a sculpture thrown into a forehead. The latex was very thin, and so didn't cover the walls much the first time; it kind of pools at the bottom of the mold. So as the latex was drying and thickness, I occasionally came back with his whirlwind around the mold of the more clothes. It took all day to put in a solid, and I left it the night in circles. Once it was dry, I dehydrated it (I used to deal in the chicken, but you could just as easily use talkum proteins or something similar) and peeled it out of the mold. I was worried about water flowing, but the latex was stronger than I expected once dried up. The chicken is making sure the latex doesn't stick to itself, which is it penchant making. I'm kind of annoyed with myself for not receiving a final picture in the heart. I thought I had, but when I looked on the camera, there didn't appear to be one. Ah well, here's how I did it: (partial) 2 rolling of canal red cassette black acrylic paint (part of) 1 16x24 piece of 2 Kim 1 piece of 1 1/1 piece 4 pipe 1 dress - Danger 1 pair of black pants and my wies straight out the dress - hanging out and wearing some gift cassettes and cassettes on end it keeps it accidentally poker in the heart with my brother in the bottle. I then type the gift at the end of the coat-hanging at the end of the hose isolation, and fold to the end on providing more protective and stiffness at the end. I went down inside the prosluation and hit the coat-hanging along the vertebral in the heart, starting in the middle and then moving to one side to point to the heart, where I cut the end of a spiral to get it to a point (Sorry if that's not clear, it's really hard to explain! Pictures should help...). I then had bent the thread to do the thing in the basic form of a heart. I put a piece of foam into the fat at the end of the tail to fill in the hole and give it more essential, and then use the built in scotch of the pipe isolation (the yellow strips are actually plastic bits to cover the scotch, just pull these off and it sticks to itself on the edge) to stick most of the heart to its round shape. I wrapped some extra cassettes around every end to keep it together where the adhesive could not. I've done little bits of tape at the fat end to make it a bit easier to attach the heart to the rest of the suit. And I brushed some black acrylic paint on it tone down the glow tape and some shade. To attach the heart, I carefully undid the season back into their pants. If you used regular pants, it would be quite simple to just sew the series back after you remove the heart. Since I've used Jeans, the seam will be a bit harder to fix if my brother decides to wear them without a heart later... Anyway, I just yielded the teen tabs in the chair in their pants. This is the first thing I knew I did for this suit. We met in a restaurant for a family dine and my brother blurted out hey daddy, I can borrow one of your hockey gloves... (which got him some seems really odd) and then the whole plan unwinds. Basically, the idea added a little essential with Kim, and covered the whole thing in tapes. Materials: 1 (right hand) hockey glove (partial) 2 rolled in channel red canal black paint acrylic 1 1 16x24 piece of 2 kim (part of) 1 piece of 1 1/4 pipe isolation once again, I unfortunately don't have good pictures of the thing ending somehow, except for the final pictures at the end of the instructible. Tiny, the first thing I did was cut a piece of foam to cover the bottom of the glove and extend a bit further beyond it. I attached it by wrapping the whole thing with tape, as it's really not good at sitting to Kim. Then I head to the piece at the end of the piece (so that they would have beautiful corners) and typed those around the top and bottom of the original piece of the foam piece. I also cut four disk out of the draft to tap the isolation used to make the heart, and tap those gloves into, three on the knives in the back of the hand and one on the right inch. I covered everything in tape channel and brushed it with black acrylic paint like I did in the heart. The makip for this suit took about 2 hours completely to completely end, including unwanted times that were probably lengths by a super break. The materials: 1 pack red foundation cream teatic makeup 1 small pack black foundation teatic cream makeup facing powder red nail polished 2 dollar shop hair extension 1 red twist poll 1 pack pancake hair and spirit prostetic adhesive paint scotch (cold) makeover horn to do earlier firstly, we've dug my brother's head off. You could save use a bald cap, but we didn't have a good one, so there you go. Then he changed into the shirt for the suit, so that he shouldn't pull a shirt off his face face. Then I painted his red nails, because I couldn't think of a better way to make them stay red and just make makeup. As for attaching the horns, I basically followed the instructions on the prosthetic adhesives that I had, which means I painted a dress on the edges of the device, waited for it to clear, added another dress, and then waited again. Once he withdrew clear a second time, I stuck him to his forehead and went to the corners with a paint brush and last fluid. During the end of the sex, I used the red foundation with a sponge mark to paint his hands and Red. Once everything was dry (and after we got super) I started applying makeup to her face, first using the dark cream foundation and a painted painted in the facial lines and went through the cracks and ridges of the horns. I then went over the whole thing with the purple foundation, and gave it all a dress of translucent proteins to wear it. For the boards, which slightly showed up in these pictures (I wish I'd had time to make them thicker, but at that time she was already running late for her vagina), I used spirit gum and hair foam to add a bit of fuzz to her face side. Admiringly, this part didn't work out as intended, and eventually fell. It might be that in the rush we were in getting him out the door, we didn't let the spirit gum set up enough before we tried to stick the hair out of it. It may be just that the thing was just too heavy for gum spirits to keep him up. In any case, we used: 2 dollar shop hair extension 1 red twist gum spirit I painted the spirit gum across the back of my brother's head and left it dry for a few minutes until attacking, I then pasted the two hair extensions throughout the back of itself and got it kept them in place while the spirit gum is set up. I gathered at the end of the hair and wrapped the same tie around doing it in a pony hair, and then I tried to cross it in a track of a heart. At this point, it looked pretty good, but as I mentioned, it fell in later. (Once the makeup was done, it was almost time to put the whole thing together. First, a couple of odds and finished accessories: the hellboy suit includes 2 rosaries (or 1 necklace with a collection of random necklaces and a wooden cross, depending on which elbow you look at). One is a normal size necklace he puts around his wrist. The other buckle on his belt. I actually did both of the rosaries for this suit, but I don't feel like making a great jewelry tutorial, so I've just included the rosaries as materials themselves.

For this step you need: 1 (left hand) leaf glove, or your gloves don't mind cutting the fingers off 1 small rose, or the corpses and cross to make one 1 large necklace, or a large wooden cross with some necklaces so for this suit, we bought a cheap pair of strong leather gloves and cut the fingers to the left one. As mentioned, I also assembled their rosaries. It was mostly wireless beads on string for the small one, although I used a string of kind stretch elastic for the vagina to wrap around the wrist, as it just made it easier to put on. The one for the belt was just bit random in chains and wooden necklaces put together and get bought with a wooden cross. Finally, it was time for him to actually get dressed. Here's what we had at the end of this spread turn: 1 younger brother or others (now with his head covered and covered in red brands) 1 black shirt 1 dress trench 1 sled 1 pair of black trousers (and one tail attached) 1 black boot pair black 1 belt 1 Hellboy Belt Buckle (brother I got buy a limited in the DVDs) 1 cigar and everything that was done in all the other steps! He'd already put on the shirt, and so it was just a case of adding trousers and clothes, wire the necklace on the left side of the belt and the hotel on the right, attaching the belt loop, wearing the belt, and putting on their boots. That left the cigar, which we had wrapped, and once we established that neither one we didn't want to smoke it, continued to smoke part of it and burn the end with a lighter. This caused him to disintegrate a bit, but my brother decided he liked it as it reminded him of a scene in the movie... I was hoping to get some picture-competition-worthy, but some of the schemes I got outside were either terrible turmoil or else it had its eyes closed &gt;.&t; so the photos I had been cooking in the mom's cookie before we went out there will have to do.
